Fact Sheet: Illegal Youth Access to Tobacco in Maryland

December 19, 2014

It is against Maryland state and federal law to sell tobacco products to youth under 18 years of age. Maryland retailers routinely violate this law.

About 1 of 4 Maryland licensed retailers illegally sell tobacco to underage youth

- In inspections conducted October 2012-September 2013, 24.1 percent of Maryland tobacco retailers sold cigarettes to underage youth.¹ Maryland is anticipated to be the only state in the nation with a violation rate over 20 percent for this time period.
- In May-September 2014, the non-compliance rate for Maryland retailers increased to 31.9 percent, with one jurisdiction as high as 54.7 percent.²
- Separate inspections conducted under different methods by the Food and Drug Administration most recently found a non-compliance rate of 23.8 percent among Maryland retailers.

Maryland Youth Say it is Easy to Buy Tobacco

- Among Maryland underage students who smoked on at least 20 of the past 30 days, 26.4 percent reported that they usually bought their own cigarettes from a gas station, convenience or other store.
- Among all students under 18 who reported current smoking and purchasing their cigarettes from a retail outlet during the previous 30 days, only 37.5 percent of those attempting to purchase cigarettes were asked to show photo identification.

¹ Federal Synar Amendment inspections, data anticipated to be published in FFY 2014 report, June 2015

² Preliminary Federal Synar Amendment inspections, data anticipated to be published in FFY 2015 report, June 2016

- When not asked to show photo identification, 78.7 percent of the underage youth reported being successful in their purchase of cigarettes.

Nearly all smokers in Maryland begin tobacco use when they are under the age of 18. The access to this deadly product that is illegal to be sold to minors often leads to a lifelong addiction to nicotine for these youth.
